

Unveiling of the Rednal Trams Information Board

Details from the panels researched by members of the Lickey Hills Society and designed by Keith and Simon Woolford

The board will be sited behind LaiLing Cantonese Restaurant, by the path into Cofton Park. Our thanks to Elliott Gardens management team for permission to use their land.

The board was funded thanks to a generous grant from the Midland Adult School Union.

On one side of the board, “A Tram to the Lickeys” panel tells of the part played by the trams in the growth of Rednal since the first tram arrived at the iconic Rednal terminus 100 years ago in 1924. A small portion of the original track can be seen in front of the board.

On the other side, the “Rednal Village” panel shows how, in the early part of the 20th Century, the arrival of the trams led to the village becoming a tourist centre. Some buildings from that period still exist, like the ‘Hare and Hounds’, whilst others have long since gone.
